

Connecticut Ancestry eNews – delivered November 5, 2013

Hello CAS members,

This email is a bit late, so I hope you've been checking the journal for our program schedule.

This Saturday, Nov. 9, Fred Hart, CG, FASG, will be talking to CAS about genealogical writing. Fred has a great deal of experience with writing. He has published dozens of articles in Connecticut Ancestry as well as many other journals.

Genealogical writing is not just about publishing, though. If you write a report to yourself about your own research, or write a simple narrative about one of your ancestors, you will get a very different perspective on what you have done. You will learn where your evidence is weak or strong and where you may need to figure out how to deal with conflicting evidence, for example.

I hope you will come to hear Fred's perspective on writing. Saturday, Nov. 9, Trumbull Public Library. Doors open at 10, the program begins at 10:30.

After that we will take our Winter break, and will meet again in Stamford in February.

Good luck with your research,

Nora Galvin
CAS President
